Gold mining and cattle grazing have left their scars on this bit of desert. The pickless prospector has gophered everywhere among the hills.

Joshua country

Joshua tree belongs to the same family as the mim. They are both illis and the lily is the Smith family of the plant world. In this lily family, there is a genus known as the yucca! And the yucca also takes a variety of forms, probably the degeneration of the Spanish bayonet. But one of these yuccas found the conditions a part of the Southwest desert greatly to its liking and became a sirable tree: a green sort of plant with only arms crooked at the elbow, and so unsymmetrical that it looks as though it were constantly asking itself the question: "What shall I do next?" A source of the yuccas are nearly 40 feet high.

The name was given to this giant yucca by the Mormons, who saw in its extended arms a symbol pointing to the promised land they were seeking. It may be so but the promised land must have been pointing in all points of the compass, for the Joshua tree points everywhere, including up and down. Though the tree itself may be nothing of beauty, when blooming time comes it sends forth a cluster of creamy-white blossoms a foot long at the very ends of its branches.

Joshua tree to the east

Coshoia trees are well scattered throughout the Mojave but the ~~forest~~ stand, a real Joshua forest, is found east of Renoirville - or south of Ambury, or north of Indio by creatures but sometimes to be glimpsed - mountain sheep

Coyote
desert fox bobcat from a point on the ridge of the Little San Bernardinos, known as Salton View, you may have one of the greatest desert views of the country. You are a little more than 5000 feet above sea level but the nature of the surrounding land is such that there is a panorama of mountain, valley and desert. You see the Salton Sea of the Imperial Valley, the date gardens of the Coachella Valley, the great escarpment of Mount San Jacinto and on some clear days you may even look into old Mexico.

Pattern of Subterfuge.

Just north of Mexicali. above the Salton Sea a dark-eyed junco bird flitted from desert willow to the smokebrush trees as the van

Returning to the California Union would deliver to him the time and space to nurse his ideas about his secret self, what it might be, a real problem in his life
